Coaches Go-Karting Under a Microscope at S&T

This is a special SeaNN weekly report, straight outta Swings-n-Things in North Olmsted, Ohio. One week ago, the coaches didn't know it, but they were being watched. Scouts from various driving, racing, and delivery companies looked out upon the go-kart race track last fateful Wednesday, searching for new driving talent for their respective companies. Each coach was offered a job!

Coach Justin, of course, for recklessness and disregard for rules was offered a job at a local demolition derby. "I feel that I was born to run into things!" coach Justin exclaimed. "Nothing gives me more joy that seeing the sparks fly off the cars of my enemies. I can't wait to start this new job!"

Coach Brooke was a bit of a safer driver, and the local nursing home took notice. "They're telling me I'm the safest driver they've ever seen, though I don't buy it," coach Brooke said. "Slow does not mean safe. Now they want me to cart old people around for the rest of my life... and consequently theirs."

Coach Jason was offered a job with UPS. "The boy gets places on time. Efficiency, thy name is Coach Jason." said Mr. UPS man. "Easiest hire we've ever made."

A local Amtrak scout even came to the event to watch on. Arnold Amtrak, the scout and founder, took special notice in Coach Emily. "The girl can't drive in a straight line to save her life... normally this would be an issue, but at Amtrak, we think differently," he said. "On a train track, there is no steering. What could she do wrong!"

Aayushi and Grace were not initially noticed by anyone in particular, but soon they too found a home in the world of driving. As it turns out, a local golf course needed golf cart drivers.

The junior coaches were not offered any driving jobs. Their sub-par, unsafe, and reckless driving made sure of that. In fact, legal action was taken out against coach Kyle for not-existing at the wheel. "You've heard of sleeping at the wheel, this is much worse," said Supreme Town Sheriff Robin. "Dude could have gotten someone killed. He will be joining my other criminals in jail. That's the job I'm offering him! Prison prison prison!" #FreeKyle protests have begun to break out all over the city.
